

LARGE THROG ATTENDS PICNIC AT TOWER PARK

Arsenal Employees Give Successful Day's Outing With Splendid Continuous Program.

At noon yesterday 6,000 arsenal employees and guests were gathered on the grounds of Watch Tower park. At 5 o'clock 12,000 were there, and by 9 o'clock in the evening more than 15,000 persons had paid war tax at the gate, according to the statements of the gatekeepers.

The biggest and most successful picnic of any organization this year was held yesterday, when practically the entire arsenal force, their families and friends attended the outing of arsenal workers.

Games and some form of amusement for every visitor, together with plenty of just solid comfort were provided for and found. The program of events was nicely planned and filled up the time logically and agreeably. Athletics started at 10 a. m. as per schedule and the last number, the horseshoe throwing contest, concluded during the last hour of light, vacations at noon and at 6 o'clock being taken from the events for meals. This precise arrangement was noted in all parts of the affair. Everything was taken care of in detail, down to bringing from the arsenal sufficient ice to fill a number of large tanks of water at advantageous points about the grounds.

Compliments Arsenal Workers.

The two chief features of the day were the address by Colonel H. B. Jordan and the baseball game, the first two events of the afternoon. In his speech the colonel paid many high compliments to the arsenal force for their part in winning the war. He also spoke at length on subjects interesting to them all and concerned with the conduct of routine at the arsenal, urging them to keep up to their present high standard of workmanship.

The baseball game was not especially fast or exciting, though many old hands at the sport pronounced it a "good game." The spirit of rivalry was not strong enough to bring out the best efforts of the players, and the play was good natured all through. The chief element of excitement was the frequent flying of a ball into the thickly packed crowd about the diamond. Although the ball barely missed assassinating someone a score of times, there was no injury inflicted to any bystander. McKnight's team of picked warriors from the arsenal workers defeated the opposition gloriously to the tune of 8 to 2. His battery was Kennedy and Condon, working against Thomas and Irig. The game was marked by superior fielding and mound work, although the batting was not especially good.

Uniformed Officials.

Arsenal firemen and policemen in full regalia controlled the crowds and patrolled the grounds all day. Both afternoon and evening such an immense crowd gathered to see and hear the six acts of hippodrome vaudeville being presented in the outdoor shell that many went away disappointed in this respect, from being unable to see over the throng. Concessions, which were not taken over by the arsenal, had a big day, and the various chutes, moories and coasters were kept warm with exertion. At the gate 10 cents and a cent for war tax was charged. All money taken in above expenses will go to the sick benefit fund of the arsenal aid association. The dancing in the pavilion was very popular, and the floor was crowded early in the afternoon and in the evening. Official sanction for shutting down the plant on this occasion was not secured nor asked for, as long consideration at Washington would have been necessary for such a step. Instead, absence from work was allowed to every worker who presented such a request. This had virtually the same effect, since eight shops were entirely closed by noon from lack of operators.

Crowd Set Record.

The manager, R. R. Stephenson of the Tower, said that yesterday's crowd was the largest which has ever gathered on that ground in a single day. Ten-minute car service was inaugurated after 11 a. m. The chairman of the committees who so ably supervised the conduct of the program were as follows: Captain F. H. Keller, picnic committee; Howard Carroll, athletic committee; E. J. Dorgan, arrangements; W. H. Hender, amusements.
